A portion is fitted up as offices and show rooms.

The dwelling consists of large and well situated rooms, painted throughout, with a spacious hall entrance, and the whole is so arranged that they could be sublet to many tenants.

There is also a good stable and large yard, and water laid on. Indeed the place is complete with every requisite for carrying on the largest mercantile business in Sydney, as well as a private residence suitable for a respectable family.

The whole premises are exceedingly well adapted for a first-rate hotel or place of entertainment (a thing so much required at present) and if so occupied by a man of taste, would far excel any other establishment in the colony.

The view from the large balcony, though situated in the centre of the city, from its elevated position, commands the Harbour, North Shore, Balmain, and the Government Domain, and the position is considered one of the most salubrious in Sydney.

NICHOLSON C. BROWN.

This was an action for breach of contract, the plaintiff being a miller residing at Maitland, and the defendant being the captain of the ship Templar. The declaration set out a contract between the parties, whereby the Templar was chartered by plaintiff for a voyage from Newcastle to Port Phillip at £750, with an option to plaintiff to charter her, after her return, for a second voyage of the same kind and on the same terms. It then set out a demand on plaintiff for the chartering of the ship for such second voyage, and a refusal by ahip for such second voyage, and a refusal by defendant to adhere to this part of his con-tract. Defendant denied that there had been any proper demand by plaintiff of the nature alluded to.

Counsel for plaintiff, Messrs, Foster and Meynott; attorneys, Messrs, Rowley and Holdsworth, Counsel for defendant, Messrs, Darvall and Fisher; attorney, Mr. Rogers,
Plaintiff chartered the Templar on the 24th June, and despatched her in September last from Newcostle to Melbourne, with horses, rain dairy reading. Sec. and two passesses.

from Newcostle to Melbourne, with horses, grain, dairy produce, &c., and two passengers, upon which voyage, according to the evidence of the supercargo, plaintiff made a profit of £1500. Before the vessel left Newcastle plaintiff gave notice to the defendant that he should require the Templar to go a second voyage to Melbourne, and no intention of breaking the agreement was manifestal on that occasion by Captain Brown. The vessel returned to Sydney on the 17th December, and shortly after was laid on for London. On the 29th December, formal no-December, and shortly after was laid on for London. On the 29th December, formal notice was given to defendant by plintiff's attorner, that the ship would be required to proceed to Melbourne. In the interim between proceed to Melbourne. In the interim between the departure of the vessel on her first voyage and the giving of this notice, plaintiff had coland the giving of this notice, plaintiff had collected goods for a second cargo of the same character as the first; but no particulars as to this cargo, its value, &c., were given. £750 was paid under the charter party for the first voyage, and a similar sum was to have been paid for the second. Freights had however risen considerably. This was relied upon as a probable cause of the breach on the one hand, and as a reason for awarding greater damages on the other, inasmuch as plaintiff must incur extra charge to send his goods to Melbourne. Plaintiff sent goods by the Mary Nicholson soon after, but upon what terms, &c., did not appear.
The defence was, that Captain Brown had a right to assume that the services of the vescel were not required for a second voyage, and the notice of 29th December, coming long after the ship had been haif on for London was not a reasonable notice.

His Meson told the Love that if they were lected goods for a second cargo of the same reasonable notice. His Hoxon told the Jury that if they were catisfied that there had been a reasonable no-tice given, the plaintiff would be entitled to a verdict with nominal damages. He would be entitled also to recover the amount actually bost by this breach, but it did not appear to his Bonor that the jury had any data before them from which they could calculate the extent of this loss.

The jury found for the plaintiff—damages £187 10s.

The other cases on this day's list were of an unimportant nature. One, Drayer v. Mackennia, was for the illegal sale and seizure of a horse, saddle, and bridle, the only real contest being se to the value, which the jury estimated at £16. A second case, Lancaster e. Arthur, was an action upon a bill of exchange, in which a verduct was taken by consent, subject to the opinion of the Court, as to whether verbal notice of dishonour by one of the parties to the instrument were sufficent. The other cases were undefended.

Court adjourned until ten o'clock this morn-UALTERS FOR TO DAY.—Hanratty v. Kelly, Wood v. Carter, Tuting v. Donald, M'Culloch v. Poole, Doe v. Robinson.

The Weather.—During the last fortnight occasional showers have fallen in this neighbourhood, refreshing the parched ground, and poutting it in good condition for ploughing for next season's wheat crop; although too late, we fear, to save a considerable portion of the late maize, a fine crop from which was at one time expected. During the last two or three days continued rain has again fallen in this neighbourhood, particularly on Wedneeday and Thursday night. So far as we are able to learn, there has not been much rain up the country, except in New England, where several days rain had fallen, we are told. In other districts we hear that a night's heavy rain has fallen, or showers for a day or two, but not continued rain.—Maitland Mercury.

Discontinued rain.—Maitland Mercury.

Atkins, charged by Sergeant Swainson with Discongracy Conduct. Benjamin Jackson, Henry Ellson, and Thomas Oatley, were yesterday brought before the Mayor and Mr. Arkina, charged by Sergeant Swainson with having, in King-street, between 6 and 7 o'clook on Sunday evening, created a disturbance by their drunken and disorderly conduct. They were quarrelling among themselves, it appeared, and making a great noise, much to the snnoy-ance of the great number of persons who at that time were proceeding to their respective places of worship. The screeant middly remonstrated with them on the impropriety of their conduct, and desired them to go quietly away. Two of the three, (Jackson and Oatley), however, turned upon the friendly sergeant of police, and abused him roundly; said they were Californians, and could beat all the police in Sydney; with assistance they were conveyed to the lock-up, followed by perhaps a couple of hundred regamuffins, who endeavoured to excite the prisoners to resist the police in their praiseworthy efforts to maintain peace and good order. Ellson having desisted when desired, he was discharged with an admonition; Jackson and Oatley were sentenced to any a resulty of 65 seach. Loh-

John Lynch was then brought up, charged with having excited the abovementioned peasons to resist the police, by calling out, "Don't go with them—pitch into them," and so on. He was ordered to pay a penalty of 5s. with 2s. 6d. costs, or be imprisoned for three days. In each case the penalty was paid.

Hionway Ronneay.—A man in the employ of Mr. Stanfield, of Waverley, was on Saturday stopped near Holt's lence on the South Head Road, by a man armed with a brace of pistols, demanding his money; somewhat alarmed, the man hynded out a couple of shillings, which the rascal pocketed, and skulked away. A few minutes later, and while the cart was still in sight, a person named Primrose was pulled up by the same individual, but had no money about him, and was allowed to pass on. This was in broad daylight, between four and five o'clock. Such an occurrence, on a road so much frequented, must surely indicate a supposed deficiency of police protection, or such barefaced attempts would scarcely be risked. The man is described as of about 5 feet 6 infhes in height, with brown hair and whiskers, and wearing dark clothes.

STOLEN OR STRAYED.—John Anderson and Francis M'Carthy were vesterday brought before Messrs. Arkins and Peek, charged by William O'Brien, of Camperdown, butcher, with having on the 11th instant, stolen a calf his property. It appeared that early on Thursday morning last defendants drove a herd of bullocks along the road towards Sydney, and, when passing O'Brien's place the calf in question abandoned its mother and joined the herd: O'Brien endeavoured to recover the animal, but not succeeding the drovers promised to keep it for him and drive it home on the first opportunity; next day O'Brien went after his calf, one of defendants said he would look after it at the Swamp, and if he did not succeed in recovering the animal he would see him O'Brien paid its value; O'Brien saw them again on the same day on the subject, demanding payment; his importunity displeased the drovers, who made him a rather short reply; he then procured a warrant for their apprehension, he having made a complaint on oath that these persons had stolen the calf in question. O'Brien on cross-examination by Mr. Nichols admitted that if he had received the value of the calf this proceeding would not have been taken. Their worships dismissed the defendants at once; there was clearly no felony, and whatever remedy O'Brien had it was by an appeal to civil law.

Discharged. — Thomas Davis Harvey, pawnbroker, charged with having in his possession a Colt's revolver, knowing it to have been stolen,—and a young man named Thomas, given into custody on suspicion of having stolen nine sovereigns,—were yesterday both discharged from custody. There was no evidence on which it might be presumed that Harvey came dishoncetly into possession; while Thomas's having been given into custody at all appeared to be quite unauthorised and uncilled for. The Bench intimated to Thomas that there was nothing whatever in the case to cast a shade upon his character.

Water Power of the brigantine Sea. Seepent, appeared on semmons before the Water Police magistrate, to answer the claims of two of the seamen for compensation wages, he having refused to pay them their monthly wages, after the return of the vessel from an unfortunate trip to the Clarence River, until compelled by an awred of the Water Police Bench. Mr. Nichols and Mr. Green appeared for the seamen. The circumstances of this case have been frequently leafer the public during the last few weeks. The seamen shipped for a coasting voyage to the Clarence River, about the middle of January is when about two days at sea, the master ordered the mate to breach the cargo of spirits, and distributed gin amongst the crew. In consequence of his drunkenness, and of an accident which he most with, the trigastine was put back to Sydney, and upon her arrival here, the men refused to go any more to sea with here, on the ground of the Captain's drunkenness. This was explained to proceed on the open and with the same master. After her departure he hearth at the cargo of spirits had been broached, and his therefore refused to pay the original error until the return of the vessel. The men used for their wages in the Water Police, "and recovered the full amount; and afterwards sued the master for the compensation allowed under the 11th section of the New South Waless Merchant Seamen's Act (13 Vict. No. 28). Upon the hearing of the first of the latter cases Mr. Beann decided in favour of the claim, but made the order referable to the master alone declining the new town that the owner of the skip. Mr. Green thereupon withdrew the other informations against the master, and filed new ones against the owner when he was clearly lable. It was attempted to be shown that the owner of the skip. MARCH 10. - Last week I referred to some new

This little circumstances gives a sample of the deceptions that are practised, and by these unfair representations of our actual position of course no little injury is done. Deception is also practised in another way; the richness of some claims is exaggerated by parties who are anxious to dispose of them, and get a bonus for their property; so that we have really some difficulty in weighing the merits of the different accounts we hear, and ascertaining where the truth really lies. Our escorts are not a fair criterion, for a great quantity is still transmitted by private hands. The quantity bought by gold buvers does not give a true return of all the gold produced, for some parties are known to hoard their earnings till it amounts to some respectable quantity, say 100 ounces or more, and then send it down or very likely take it down to Sydney, and sell it there. Although, therefore, we are sometimes accused of exaggerating our returns, there are some reasons why we believe we very often give far below the actual proceeds. It has struck us that there is one aspect in which we may possibly have given a mistaken idea of the receipts of those who dig. We sometimes give a certain number of ounces as obtained in a day, and from this, some who do not understand the practice of gold digging, and have not been initiated into its mysterious arcan a may set themselves to calculate in this way:—
"So many ounces a day will be so many a week, that multiplied by 65 will give a grand total for the year; heigh bo! my fortune's made; I will be off to the diggings. Now in order to prevent any misconception or any disappointment of this kind, we wish now to made; I will be off to the diggings. Now in order to prevent any misconception or any disappointment of this kind, we wish now to state that these returns are given to show the actual richness of the country, but by no means to auguest the idea that with the digger every day is to be alike profitable. In order to obtain these 4, 6, or 12 ounces, or whatever the number may be given as the daily return, some days of previous hard work are necessary. All the ceremonies of digging and stripping must be gone through, and perhaps while the quantity mentioned is realised in one day, it has taken three days to get at it. I make this remark because I am most anxious to give a correct view, and would most scrupulously avoid misleading any by delusive hopes. From an account of the gold which was actually sold on the two flats during the last week of February, it appears that 713 oss. were then disposed of, and this among less than 590 diggers. The number of licences issued up to this date, in these localities is 410. Messes. Barrett and Flangan have taken up a number of claims in their Coreak and intend to make a feeb appearance of rain. It is not at present very heavy, but there is every prospect of its con-tinuance. However, notwithstanding this drawback, small parties have taken out their 4 drawback, small parties have taken out their 4 and 6 ozs. a day, and espital prospects have been obtained in claims adjacent. At the Mongarlow River the diggers are going on very regularly. Very few of those who work steadily, and keep sober, fail to make their pound a day; some can turn out an ounce a day per man, and in this case can do so almost regularly for the week round, for the labour is possessed to the state of the source of the state of the stat regularly for the week round, for the labour is not so great as in some of our other gold fields, the bed rock being found a few feet below the surface. One man, who has been working perseveringly since April last has deposited between £400 and £500 as the proceeds of gold digging in the Savings' Bank. We could wish that such instances were more common; but unfortunately too many, whose receipts gold digging in the Savings' Bonk. We could wish that such instances were more common; but unfortunately too many, whose receipts have far exceeded this, seem to forget there is such an institution as a Savings' Bank, and with almost a blind fatality are urged on to squarder in a few weeks what it has cost them many a month's hard labour to acquire. When will it be otherwise?

There are no less than four tents creeted for Divine worship on Major's Creek. When they were put up Major's Creek was the chief attraction; but now only some 150 licenses are issued. It is very likely there will very soon be a reaction there, but we think it a pity that these tents were not so constructed that they might be easily moved. The population at diggings is necessarily fluctuating, and it is certainly a sad thing to see expense and trouble in putting up four really substantial tents on a creek which does not number at present more diggers than would well fill one of them. Make them movable, and let them be shifted to that spot which for the time being is the main centre of attraction. We throw out the hist in the event of any future money being applied in this manner by any religious bodies.

P.S.—Since I began to write, I find that at Spring Creek both Mr. Manning's and Mr. Zouch's party are doing very well. In the latter case, yesterday afternoon, between seven and eight ounces were obtained, and that in one cradle. We are very often hearing of parties making very good returns by working over again claims that had been abandoned as worthless, or out of which all the riches were supposed to have been taken.

Gold is still fetching high prices, even in some cases as high as £3 13s. per oz.

GENTLEMEN.—Will you be kind enough
(if it be in your power) to inform me of the

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Revald. To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald, GENTLEMEN,—It is but a few days ago that I came into this colony. The return of a member for Sydney was the first matter that met my eyes on perusing the papers of the day. I remember well the granting the boon by the home authority to this colony—I say boon, for as such it was asked, and as such given. The day for the nomination came, and on coming into town I made many inquiries of natties whom I would have expected to be in-

The day for the nomination came, and on coming into town I made many inquiries of parties whom I would have expected to be interested in the success of the election; but no, some did not know it was the day of nomination, and others, and the greater portion too, did not care any thing about it. But great was my amazement, when I came to Macquaric-place—a mere handful of people, one half of whom appeared totally indifferent. And from the speeches made at the nomination, I soon learned that not only was there indifference on the part of the people, but there is difficulty in obtaining people such as are desirable to come forward and accept the honour of a seat in the Legislative Council. Many causes were to my inquiries assigned for this indifference. One, I believe is, that the executive is more powerful than the representative portion of that house, and that freedom which constitutes the beauty of the English House of Commons is not to be had in the Legislative Council here. This I admit—but does it mend matters to become indifferent Will it reform affairs to abstain from taking part in them? Will ever any concessions be obtained where intelligence and worth do not part in them? Will ever any concessions be obtained where intelligence and worth do not demand it? Will the home Government listen demand it? Will the home Government listen to any representation when an honorable member in the one House, or a noble member in the other, rises and says, "The colonists of New South Wales are indifferent as to the present assembly, and but few of the more intelligent and respectable of that colony will accept a seat in that House. If a more liberal measure be granted, then we have no guarantee that even that will induce those to enter the assembly whom the assembly want." The present apathy is what the aristocraey at home rantee that even that will induce those to enter the assembly whom the assembly want." The present apathy is what the aristocracy at home delight in. In this morning's paper mention is made of another member resigning his seat. I look upon this as no good omen for the future, and would suggest to every one, whether native or immigrant, 'o manifest their interest in the assembly by all 'No have the franchise to exercise it, and to press forward constitutionally, and demand that constitution for this co.'my which its capabilities require.

MISCELLANEOUS EXTRACTS. "WHO MURDERED DOWNIE?"

"WHO MURDERED DOWNIE?"

(From Household Words.)

Anour the end of the eighteenth century, whenever any student of the Marischal College, Aberdeen, incurred the displeasure of the humbler citizens, he was assailed with the question, "Who murdered Downie?" Reply and rejoinder generally brought on a collision between "town and gown;" although the young gentlemen were accused of what was a chronologically impossible. People have a right to be angry at being stigmatised as murderers when their accusers have probability on their side; but the "taking off" of Downie occurred when the gownsmen, so maligned, were in a waddling clothes.

But there was a time when to be branded as an accomplice in the slaughter of Richard Downie made the blood run to the cheek of many a youth, and sent him home to his books, thoughtful and subdued. Downie was sacrist or janitor at Marischal College. One of his duties consisted in securing the gate by a certain hour; previous to which all the students had to assemble in the common hall, where a Latin prayer was delivered by the principal. Whether, in discharging this function, Downie was more rigid than his predecessor in office, or whether he became stricter in the performance of it at one time than another, cannot now be ascertained; but there can be no doubt that he closed the gate with austere punctuality, and that those who were not in the common hall within a minute of the prescribed time, were shut out, and were afterwards reprimanded and fined by the principal and professors. The students became irritated at this strictness, and took every petty means of annoying the sacrist; he, in his turn, applied the screw at other points of academic routine, and a fierce war soon began to rage between the collegians and the humble functionary. Downie took care that in all his proceedings he kept within the strict letter of the law; but his opponents were not so careful, and the decisions of the rulers wera uniformly against them. and in favour of Downie. Relaw; but his opponents were not so careful, and the decisions of the rulers wera uniformly the decisions of the rulers wera uniformly against them, and in favour of Downie. Reprimands and fines having failed in producing due subordination, rustication, suspension, and even the extreme sentence of expulsion had to be put in force; and, in the end, law and order prevailed. But a secret and deadly grudge continued to be entertained against Downie. Various schemes of revenge were thought of the continued to the entertained against the continued to the entertained against the continued to the entertained against the entert thought of.

Downie was, in common with teachers and Downie was, in common with teachers and taught, enjoying the leisure of the short New Year's vacation—the pleasure being no doubt greatly enhanced by the annoyances to which he had been subjected during the recent bickerings—when, as he was one evening seated with his family in his official residence at the gate, a messenger informed him that a gentleman at a neighbouring hotel wished to speak with him. Downie obeyed the summons, and was ushered from one room into another, till at length he found himself in a large apartment hung with black, and lighted by a solitary candle. After waiting f r some time in this strange place, about fifty figures also dressed in black, and with black masks on their faces, presented themselves. They arranged themselves in the form of a Court, and Downie, pale with terror, was given to understand that

A judge took his seat on the bench; a clerk and public prosecutor sat below; a jury was empanelled in front; and witnesses and spectators stood around. Downie at first set down the whole affair as a joke; but the proceedings were conducted with such persistent gravity, that, in spite of himself, he began to believe in the genuine mission of the awful tribunal. that, in spite of himself, he began to believe in the genuine mission of the awful tribunal. The clerk read an indictment, charging him with conspiring against the liberties of the students; witnesses were examined in due form, the public prosecutor addressed the jury; and the judge summed up.

"Gentlemen," said Downie, "the joke has been carried far enough—it is getting late, and my wife and family will be getting anxious about me. If I have been too atrict with you in time past, I am sorry for it, and anxious about me. If I have been too strict with you in time past, I am sorry for it, and I assure you I will take more care in future."

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the judge, without paying the slightest attention to this appeal, "consider your verdict; and, if you wish to retire, do so."

The jury retired. During their absence the most profound silence was observed; and except renewing the solitary candle that burnt beside the judge, there was not the slightest movement.

Guilty.

The judge solemnly assumed a huge black cap, and addressed the prisoner.

The judge placed his watch on the bench. A block, an axe, and a bag of sawdust were brought into the centre of the room. A figure more terrible than any that had yet appeared came forward, and prepared to act the part of doomster.

"For any sake, gentlemen," said the terrified man, "let me home. I promise that you never again shall have cause for complaint."

"Richard Downie," remarked the judge, "you are vainly wasting the few moments that are left you on earth. You are in the hands of those who must have your life. No human power can save you. Attempt to utter one cry, and you are seized, and your doom completed before you can utter another. Every one here present has sworn a solemn oath never to reveal the proceedings of this night; they are known to none but ourselves; and when the object for which we have met is accomplished, we shall disperse unknown to any one. Prepare, then, for death; other five minutes will be allowed you but no more."

The unfortunate man in agony of deadly terror raved and shrieked for mercy; but the avengers paid no heed to his cries. His fevered, trembling lips then moved as if in silent prayer; for he felt that the brief space between him and eternity was but as a few more tickings of that ominous watch.

"Now!" exciaimed the judge.
Four persons stepped forward and seized Downie, on whose features a cold clammy sweat had burst forth. They bared his neck, and made him kneel before the block.

"Strike!" exclaimed the judge.
The executioner struck the axe on the floor; an assistant on the opposite side lifted at the same moment a wet towel, and struck it across the neck of the recumbent criminal A loud laugh announced that the joke had at last come to an end.

But Downie responded not to the uproarious college, who could point out the guilty or suspected fifty? Moreover, the students were scattered over the city, and the magistrates themselves had many of their own families amongst the number, and it was not desirable to go into the affair too minutely. Downie's widow and family were provided for—and his slaughter remained a mystery; until, about fifteen years after its occurrence, a gentleman on his death-bed disclosed the whole particulars, and avowed himself to have belonged to the obnoxious class of students who murdered Downie.

"MOVING."

(From Household Words.)

Max is, undoubtedly, not given to "abide in his den" for any length of time; but is always peering out of his quarters in search of better, or rather, novel accommedation. When he is in a Terrace, he has an insatiste longing for a Crescent; once removed to a Crescent, he feels that existence is only worth having in a Square. He never moves into a new house when the parlou removed: "from which time it rapidly descends in his eatimation, and he feels irresistibly inclined to migrate to a mansion in every respect the opposite of his present abode. He is in a house in a Square. The house—to an ordinary observer—is a very good house. The rooms are large and well-proportioned. Mr. Chadwick himself could find no fault with the drains; the rent is remarkably moderate; the landlord is obliging; the air is good; the inclosure is handsonnely variegated with flowers; and the supply of water is pure, abundant, and cheap-Yet Homo cannot endure it. Ask him to particularise the faults of his house or the sins of the Square, and he becomes very voluble indeed. The window on the first landing-place opens outside instead of inside; the sun never shines upon the back attic window, owing to an intervening stack of window of the sin of the Square, and he becomes very voluble indeed. The window on the first landing-place opens outside instead of from which time it rapidly descends in his estimation, and he feels irresistibly inclined to migrate to a manion in every respect the opposite of his present abode. He is in a house in a Square. The house—to an ordinary observer—is a very good house. The rooms are large and well-proportioned. Mr. Chadwick himself could find no fault with the drains; the rent is remarkably moderate; the landlord is obliging; the air is good; the inclosure is handsomely variegated with flowers; and the supply of water is pure, abundant, and cheap. Yet Homo cannot endure it. Ask him to particularise the faults of his house or the sins of the Square, and he becomes very voluble indeed. The window on the first landing-place opens outside instead of inside; the sun never shines upon the back attic window, owing to an intervening stack of chimneys; there is a board of the second-floor front room perceptibly loose. And then look at the pump in the Square, Sir, why it can only be worked by the left hand. These things are not to be borne by a sensible man; therefore Homo is looking out for a cottage in the suburbs—a cottage with bow-windows. Why bow-windows? Because his present abode has the ordinary square windows. The cottage in the suburbs—a cottage with bow-windows. The cottage in the suburbs must have two drawing-rooms communicating by folding doors. Why "must?" Because in his mansion in the Square the drawing-rooms are permanently separated.

Home finds a cottage with these peculiarities. Forthwith he engages a man who advertises on several spring-vans, that goods are carefully moved in town and country. His household gods are about to be translated from his old Purgatory in the Square to his new Elysium in the suburbs. His tables look gouty, swathed in bands of hay; his last night in the Square is passed in a room destitute of carpet. In the morning the towel-horse, he finds, has already taken to the road, having started with the first van, and his brushes are in the lower recesses of a box at the bottom of the loaded van still at the door. But when Homo compares these temporary incon-Homo compares these temporary incon-veniencies with the dungeon from which he is now emancipating himself, he bears them with a light heart.

veniencies with the dungeon from which he is now emancipating himself, he bears them with a light heart.

The miseries of moving, however, are not insignificant trials. In the first place, several days before you perceive any necessity, your wife orders the curtains to be removed from your study, and your Turkey carpet to be carried away on the back of a sturdy fellow who promises to beat it. A little square of drugget is provided, just sufficient in extent to protect your feet from the floor, provided always that you concentrate your attention upon the position of your toes throughout the morning. For one day you feel no other annoyances—as yet, you have only caught an ordinary cold; but, if you expect to get through the business with this slight inconvenience, you are unreasonable. On a succeeding day you descend quietly, as usual to the breakfast-table. A tool basket lies in your arm-chair, and a chisel is placed conveniently (for the plumber.) upon a bunch of wax-fruit: the glass of which has been carefully packed up long ago. The presence of the carpenter is painfully auggested by a strong perfume of sawdust. But you have made up your mind to leave the abominable house, and you still determine to make the best of matters. You endeavour to say a cheerful word or two to the chairmen (who appear to be making a hasty breakfast of tin-tacks.) and sit down to consume the roll and rasher. You look about for the Times; youder carpenter has perched it upon the top of his ladder, as a convenient tray for his nails. Probably you try to go out for the day after this experience. Where is your hat? The hat-stand has been carefully moved by spring van, and there is nothing in the hall but two fish-kettles and a boot-jack. Your favourite umbrella (of course being "moving" days, it rains) is nowhere to be found; and were it not that your wife has preserved from the wreck a cast off hat by stuffing it full of children's boots and bundles of trademen's receipts, and that the cook accommodates you with her gingham parachute, Wretched man! a pot of due stands upon your favourite cony of axe of a real headsman had severed his head from his body.

It was a tragedy to all. The medical students tried to open a vein, but all was over; and the conspirators had now to bethink themselves of safety. They now in reality swore an oath among themselves; and the affrighted young men, carrying their disguiaes with them, left the body of Downie lying in the hotel. One of their number told the landford that their entertainment was not yet quite over, and that they did not wish the individual that was left in the room to be disturbed for some hours. This was to give them all time to make their escape.

Next mo, using the body was found, Judicial inquiry we's instituted, but no satisfactory result could be ar vived at. The corpse of poor Downie exhibited no mark of violence internal or external. The ill-we'll between him and the students was known: it was also known that the students had hired ap artiments in the hotel for a theatrical representation—that Downie had been sent for by them; but beyond this, nothing was known. No noise had been heard, and no proof of murder or add be adduced. Of two hundred students at the CHEAP DINNER.—I went the other day to pay a visit to my respected friend Herr Von Schmidt, who lives in Germany in the dominions of his Serenity the Prince of the Towering Taxes. Herr Von Schmidt has no establishment, and there is a tradition in the neighbourhood that none of his friends have ever been able, after the closest inquiry, to ascertain where he lived. He met me at the station, however, according to previous aptwenty other familiar nooks and corners dear to you in your thoughtful, your quiet, your best and brightest hours. Wretched man! a pot of glue stands upon your favourite copy of Teanyson; your oft-pored-over chart of the Arctic Circle (in search of Franklin) is crunched round a silver candlestick; that carved and cherished paper-knife which you brought from Lucerne sticks dangerously up out of your waste-basket full of crockery, with a super-stratum of old slippers. Your silver ink-stand, "presented as a mark, &c., &c.," has totally disappeared; and distriction!—your pet corner of confusion has been put in order. You think you will, in spite of all these disturbances, write—with a crushed pen plunged at every dip feather-deep into a quart ink-jar—a few letters; but the top has been removed from your writing-table, and is rolled into a corner. In despair, you take up an odd volume, and seek solace in your wife sitting-room. Here, at least, you expect comfort. On entering, you find two maids, with outstretched arms, folding window curtims in lengths; the table is covered with a variety of finger-plates, curtain-bands, screws, and bunches of gilt grapes from the ends of the curtain-rods, scattered upon a thick layer of brass-headed nails. You express a decided conviction that this is little too bad! but you are sternly reminded that if you wish to see the heavenly villa, you comfort yourself with the reflection that this is little too bad! but you are sternly reminded that if you wish to see the heavenly villa, you comfort yourself with the reflection that this is the last time these nuisance can come within your experience. You go to bed; perhaps a little sulky. About six of clock the following morning, you are aroused from your sleep by a noise as decided as thundred that the sulky and on the sign board. It will be a present of the United Germany; and on the sign board. It will be a present of the United Germany; and on the sign board. It will be a sign be a principal in the principal in the principal in the pri from the railway to dine at the principal ins.

It goes by the name of the United Germany and on the sign board, is painted a lively and appropriate representation of the historics cats of Kilkenny. Let the reader transpot himself to the first inn of a previncial town in Bagland—neither at a watering-place nor in the immediate neighbourhood of a fashionable pack of hounds—and ask himself calmly what he would be likely to get for dinner? It is a question to which I could hardly venture to reply. In my hunting days it used to be chops, steaks, and chops, and so on, ringing the changes so often as you like; but, as I have little inclination for any of these delicacies, I wery seldom found anything that it was possible for a London appetite to digest, and I have been haunted with the ghoat of a tough country steak, and an abominable inky fluid the waiter was pleased to designate as ketchup, or some such name, for twenty-four hours after it ought to have been laid for ever. Let me, as a contrast, transcribe the dinner provided at half-an-hour's notice under the sign of the United Germany for our party of four. We had a clear (strained) soup of exquisite flavour, secompanied by powdered cheese for those fond of strong stimulants. Then craw-fish, and black bread and butter. Then a fillet of beef (pigue) with a sauce of truffles and Madeirs. Then some red cabbages, stewed apples, and mashed potatoes; some cultets of fresh pork, and some cold tongue; some cells in asparagus jelly; some hashed venison, garnished with rice: some young chickens with Perigord sauce; preserves and salad; a plum pudding; dessert, and fruit ites. This dinner coat us just three shillings a hasd. We had, moreover, napkins, a spotless table sloth, and finger glasses. I am not at all wanting the choice of Herr von Schmidt's table cloth, and finger glasses. I am not at all raunting the choice of Herr von Schmidt's dinner, which is, perhaps, the worse taste, but only the number, quality, and price of the dishes. Let the country solicitor who paid ten shillings for his dinner yesterday in a dinner yoom in Bishopsgate-street, ask himself if he dined anything like so well as we did for three and let any one of the unlucky diners-out in London condemned to a three shilling dinner, compare their bill of fare with this. Why it is, that everything should be desirer in England than in the whole world over, it is not at present our province to inquire; but the fact, as it undoubtedly exists, is extremely unreasonable, since every single article we consumed in the dominions of His Screne Highness the Prince of the Towering Taxes, with the sole exception of the truffles, can, with proper management, be obtained cheaper in London, from the cheese (Chester, by the way,) to the ice;—and the fael with which our dinner was cooked is beyond all comparison dearer than in England. The simple secret was in the judicious division of the contents of the various dishiston for the riding small dinners into a state of great perfection. Many a dozen workmen at the same factory, who carry their clammy, unwholesome dinner in their pocket-handkerchiefs, and bolt the unavoury mees with a pint of beer in the tap-room of a public-house, might, by merely clubbing the price of their separate meals, though but a few halfpence, and dining together, conduce considerably to their own comfort and the advancement of the noble science of cockery. There is an excellent workman's dinner in Paris provided for three-pence: and most of the officers' messes throughout Germany are served according to contract and very well served too, at from fweperfec to sixpence a head.—Household Words.

and any wat of Block 17, the start of Block 17, the start of Block 18, the start of Block 19, the start of Block 1 Eq., to sell by auction, at his Rooms, Pitt-street, THIS DAY, Tuesday, the 15th March, at 11 o'clock,

All that Valuable Estate, in the district of Bringelly, well known as Retrest Farm, (centrically situated, being nearly equi-distant from the townships of Liverpool, Campbelltown, and Penrith.) containing One Thousand Two Hundred Acres (1200 Acres) of Land, well watered, having an extensive frontage on the South Creek. The whole of the Estate is enclosed. About four hundred acres (400 acres) cleared and subdivided into paddecks for cultivation or grazing. The premises are large and commodious. The Cottage is a very substantial brick building, containing eight good-sized lofty rooms (drawing room, 30 x 14, dining hall, 30 x 12, the others in proportion). The building faces the east, and has a verandah on three sides, nine feet wide. The out-buildings are numerous, and very complete, consisting of brick kitchen and laundry, and servant's-room, brick dairy, pantry and stores. New brick stables, with coach-house, harness and servants' rooms, and good loft, which have Leen erected within the last two years at a cost of £300 (three hundred pounds); also six-stabled stable for farm horses, including a good box, milking shed and calf-pen, with granary above, 40 x 28 feet; new barn, with granary above, 40 x 26 feet; new barn, with cart shed; two shingled Cottages for farm servants, strong well-built stockyards, pig run and styes complete. The Garden contains 1; acre, all well trenched and planted with a variety of fruit trees and choice vines.

It was the original intention of the proprieter only to have leased this desirable property for the period he might be absent from the colony, but the uncertainty of the time of his return has induced him to come to the determination of submitting this estate to public competition, the grand criterion of the real value of freehold property in this rising colony.

Homesteads within a moderate distance of the capital are seldom in the market, and are thence daily increasing in val tunity should not therefore be overlooked by those who wish to possess an estate like the one now offered. Quit Rent redeemed.

Terms — One-third cash, one-third at six months with bank interest added, and the residue can remain for a term of years upon security of the property, at six per cent.

For further particulars respecting the estate, and for cards to view, apply to the auctioneer; and with reference to title to Henry Burton Bradley, Eq., Solicitor, Lyons'-buildings, George-street.

R. MORT is instructed to sell by public auction, at his Rooms, Pittstreet, THIS DAY, Taesday, 15th March, at 11 o'clock, (in consequence of the proprietors being about to leave the colony for England,)

Those Four capital Steamers now so actively and profitably employed in the Balmain Ferry, picnic, tug, and other occasional trades, and in which it is well known they are realizing such sprawful parturals.

Ferry, picnic, tug, and other occasional trades, and in which it is well known they are realizing such splanting the property of most convenient size, and in every respect a first-rate vessel, built upon the newest principle, very substantial, and exceedingly fast.

Two of the other boats have had a recent overhauling, their boilers taken out and thoroughly examined by Mesars. Young and Mather, Engineers.

The third one (the Waterman) is now in the hands of the new Engineers Company at Brodie and Craig's Wharf, for the purpose of having her boiler, &c., put into thorough order, so that in a few days the whole of the vessels will be in the highest state of efficiency.

As intending purchasers will be afforded every opportunity for a thorough examination of these steamers upon application to Mr. Marshall, the necessity for entering into the extensive particulars which would otherwise be required is avoided.

THE TOWN OF BALMAIN.

It may be necessary to premise that the long-pending suit in Chancery, which has hi-herto prevented the sale of this property, has been decided, and an official copy of the decree of the Master of the Rolls has reached Sydney, confirming the will of the late Dr. John Borthwiek Gilchrist, authorising a sale of the Estate, and which removes every objection to the title, and renders it as perfect as any in the colony!

The portions of the Estate which have been selected for sale, comprise the choicest blocks upon the plan, embracing

THE PLAN, which has been prepared by Mr. Charles E. Langley, Surveyor, (the roads having been carefully staked out by him according to the natural features of the land) is now obtainable on application at the Rooms of the Auctioneer, where also the Sale Plan may be seen, exhibiting the various streets and roads by which the allotments are bounded, and which have been formed with the greatest care, and with a view to making the access as easy as possible.

this town of Balmain part and parcel of the city of Sydney.

With all the disadvantages of a doubtful Title (now removed by an authority beyond which there is no appeal,) and the want of a more perfect communication with Sydney, Balmain has already attained a considerable amount of importance, and it now requires only the assistance above alluded to, to make it advance with a rapidity which will far out-rain all its previous progress. Its near comit advance with a rapidity which will far outstrip all its previous progress. Its near communication with the great outlet of out traffic, the Parramatta-road, (wanting only the contemplated Steam Punt at Five Dock to make Parramatta some miles nearer to Sydney than it is at present, and by a level road, coupled with the deep water frontages it has on all sides—its abundance of materials for building purposes—its large supply of fresh water—its elevated and healthful locality—the beautiful character of the accessor—its freewater—its elevated and healthful locality—the beautiful character of the scenery—its freedom from taxation of every kind—above all, its close proximity to the beautiful portions of Sydney—can lead those who think upon the advantages it possesses only to the one conclusion, that it is destined to be second in importance only to the metropolir itself!
